This picture shows a man who caught a fish that can grant him a wish. You can find a hovel owned by the fisherman in the picture, which shows that the fisherman is very poor. However, the fisherman released it. After his wife listened to him, she insisted that the fisherman had to go back and make a wish for a new house. You may think that the fisherman would become rich, but ridiculously, nothing was changed in the end. The first scene and the last scene in this story are the same!

This story teaches us a very meaningful moral lesson ----- don't be greedy. Through the change of the situations of the fisherman and his wife, we can find the reason why they return to normal. It is because of the greed of the wife who proposed many wishes, with each wish bigger than the previous wish she made! This makes the fish angry and punish them. If I were the fisherman, of course, I would not listen to my wife, because her greed would make all things become normal. However, I would not release the fish before I was granted one wish, as my living condition is not good. I hope my living environment can be improved. If I could make a wish, I would let the fish go and it would give the story a good ending.
